

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

The action of broadcasting an extremely partisan and biased "documentary" on the public airwaves is direct electioneering. It circumvents election laws. If you allow a blatant violation of law to go forward unhindered, then you make a mockery of what the FCC stands for.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard.

Thank you.
